Anchor Navigation

User experience:
as a user I would like to jump to defined areas to directly access the required information, especially on longer pages to avoid scrolling.

Editor experience:
As an editor I would like to provide a table of content at the top of the page with individual anchor links to guide the user to a specific area on this page.

Precondition to use the anchor navigation are defined deeplinks on the specific content page on the level of component header as described above under "Anchor links".

In addition to the link name the editor can define another shot headline in the component header, that is used specifically within the anchor navigation bar. If no short headline is defined, the component headline H2 will be shown within the anchor navigation bar.

Within the page properties the editor can find the option to show the anchor navigation. Further another anchor navigation headline can be defined (optional).
